Financial Report Ending December 31, 2019

Tyler Winningham, CFO addressed the Council calling their attention to the end of year numbers in the report, and the fact that the City is showing approximately 3.7% over budget for 2019. He reminded the Council that at the beginning of the year, the numbers were down for several months, but the numbers have taken an upturn since. He also reminded them that the final numbers in several line items have not come in yet so those numbers will change. He said that once the final numbers have come in, he would revise the report and send to the Council. He added that the 1.5-million-dollar net expense for the year was due to the new City Hall project. The 2019 expenditures for that project were 1.7 million dollars. Minus those numbers, the City would have had a $200,000 net revenue for the year. He called their attention to the balance sheet for the General Fund stating that the reserve account now shows a little more than one million instead of the two million, as the transfer was made in November for the Council action that was approved. He reminded them that in the 2020 budget there is $250,000 to begin repayment of these funds. The plan is to return the reserve fund to two million over the next four years. He called the Council’s attention to some new numbers that are audit entries related to 2018, and the OPED entries, explaining that this is due to the City being required to recognize a potential liability for retirees that are still on the City’s health insurance. He referenced the quarterly financial statements saying that the City has paid off the HP Bond Issue of 2008, a 2.2-million-dollar bond issue for parking and site improvements at the old HP facility, as well as several other debts. He concluded by saying that the City’s debt situation has improved over the last few years. Councilwoman Smith made a motion to approve the Financials ending December 31, 2019 and Councilwoman Isby seconded it. The motion carried 8-0.

He added that these bonds commonly known as Act 9 Bonds (Industrial Development Bond Act), are secured by lease revenues paid by the company for the project, so the City is not liable for any funds. There was an RFP sent out in 2014, it was estimated to go live in 2015, but because of problems with the third party that was supposed to implement the project, we didn’t get to sign off on it until March of 2017. He added that they have worked with some third parties to try and get the system to work and meet the needs of the City but has never been satisfactory. Last June a committee was formed to look at the process of replacing the current system. Several vendors were evaluated, and the committee is confident that they have found one that will serve the needs of the City. James Walden, Planning Director addressed the Council stating that the company they have chosen is Tyler Technology’s EnerGov. He said that different packages were looked at, and it was considered how the system would be monitored and serviced by the company after purchase. He said that Tyler Technologies would closely govern the implementation of the system, and the committee felt that based on their research, this was the gold standard and would best serve the community. Mayor Castleberry stated that he purposefully did not include this purchase in the 2020 budget because a final cost had not been established. Aaron Knight added that one of the opportunities they had in this process was to look at using our cooperative purchase agreements which creates room to negotiate. He added that the initial investment will be just under the amount invested in the ACCEL system and the annual rate will be comparable. Councilman Pruitt asked if any other cities in Arkansas use this system presently. Mr. Knight stated that Fayetteville, Fort Smith uses it and Bentonville uses the Finance piece of the system. Mayor Castleberry asked if we would be able to migrate Springbrook over to the new system and Mr. Knight said that yes, the Springbrook data would be able to migrate to the new system. Councilman Hawkins asked City Attorney Chuck Clawson if there was any legal recourse regarding the current system that has never performed as promised. Mr. Clawson stated that several options were looked at, but it was determined that the best thing was to look for another system. Mr. Walden added that Mr. Clawson had written a very strong letter to Accela and as a result we were able to get out of the 10-year contract initially entered into. D. New Business

1. Update on condemnation cases for the City of Conway.
City Attorney Chuck Clawson addressed the Council, stating that one of the main jobs of the City Attorney’s office is to manage the City’s contractual arrangements to avoid litigation which drains the City’s resources. But at times the litigation prevention/avoidance methods don’t work, then there can be lawsuits to deal with. He said that the City has several cases pending court at this time and a couple of appeals, which for a City the size of Conway and with all the projects, employees, services offered, and contracts involved, sometimes litigation is unavoidable. He added that there are nine cases actively litigated at this time and in the civil cases he feels very strongly about the City’s legal position being good. He attributed that to the training that City employees have received, and good decisions being made in the field. Mr. Clawson explained that with all the ongoing construction and street projects, the City is seeing more condemnation cases. He said that these are some of the more time consuming and complicated cases that we have, and his office has been very successful in reaching resolution with these cases, and he attributed much of this success to his Chief Deputy, Charles Finkenbinder. Mr.
Finkenbinder addressed the Council explaining that condemnation or eminent domain is where the City takes private property for public use, whether it’s a sidewalk, road expansion, overpass, etc., and that’s where litigation can arise because of disputes over the value of the property taken. He said that the City has developed a good method of dealing with these cases where a fair appraisal is taken of the property, and an offer is made to the property owners. If an agreement cannot be reached, then it is often necessary to pursue the matter through the Circuit Court. He referenced the Sturgis Road expansion stating that he and Mr. Clawson took that to a jury in 2018 and that resulted in an 84% reduction in the claim, or about $55,000. He said that there is also the 6th Street Overpass case, in which they felt that the methodology used by the expert witness retained by the landowner was flawed. They did the research and filed a motion and brief, and at the hearing the judge found in favor of the City. He added that this was a $320,000 in reduction in the claim by the landowner. He said that the goal is that the City pays a fair value for the property, but no more. He referred to the Central Landing Boulevard project stating that there is a trial forthcoming on that case. He reminded the Council that the Tyler Street Project is nearing completion and said that the Transportation Department did an amazing job in reaching agreements with many property owners, but a few that could not were forwarded to the City Attorney’s office, which were resolved in a very short time. He said it was a good example of the policy of their office, that every interaction with every citizen should be a positive one. He added that he was proud of the fact that on the Tyler Street project they were able to save one citizen, a Vietnam Veteran living on a very fixed income, $300 when his mortgage company wanted to charge him $300 to process the paperwork to get the condemnation done for the property needed for the sidewalk. The City Attorney’s office working with the Transportation Department, the mortgage company and the Faulkner County Title Company, were able to get the fee waived. Councilwoman Mehl added that most of the property owners on Tyler Street received new mailboxes as part of the sidewalk project. Mr. Finkenbinder said that overall the interaction with property owners on the project was positive.

There was no further discussion. The meeting was adjourned.
